

IMPORTANT - Do you hold personal data of members? - Then you need to understand your new obligations

GDPR will replace the existing data protection framework under the EU Data Protection Directive, and will apply to all organisations in Ireland and across the EU. The GDPR emphasises transparency, security and accountability by data controllers, while at the same time standardising, and strengthening the right of European citizens to data privacy.

Organisations involved in data processing of any sort need to be aware that the new Data Protection regulation coming into effect on the 25th May 2018 addresses them directly in terms of the obligations it imposes.

The significant change that GDPR brings is threefold:

1. Customers must give explicit consent to data gathering.
2. Data protection authorities will have more robust powers to tackle non-compliance, including significant administrative fining
3. It will be considerably easier for individuals to bring private claims against data controllers when their data privacy has been infringed.
